AUG -5 1924

Billy surprises Alice in her lover's arms, shoots him, and is shot by his wife, who later shoots Bert, the sheriff, and turns the gun on herself. After all this bloodshed, the company -- they are rehearsing an act for their new amateur dramatic society -- decides to enact the piece written by the plumber, because, to quote Bert: "It's a pipe!"

They do...and it's awful. Bert, pinch hitting as a property man, gums things up, mixes his cues, ruins the effects and raises the dickens generally. After accidentally knocking over a couple of sets, he sets fire to the paper snow-drift, the engines arrive, wreck the stage and drench the principals and audience.
